

CEOs discuss how to deal with extreme views in the workplace

February 26, 2018 07:00 AM

Updated February 22, 2018 03:03 AM

This week's question to South Florida CEOs who are on the Miami Herald CEO Roundtable: What would you do if one of your employees began espousing extreme views in the workplace?

===

“We encourage and welcome a wide range of views, but what we don't tolerate is language that threatens, offends or harasses others. If the employee espoused views that fell into the latter category, we have a zero-tolerance policy and strict procedure in place to address it.”

Kim Stone, general manager and EVP, AmericanAirlines Arena